Indian Matters in Eastern Oregon

We have a letter from Warm Springs dated February 1st which gives further information concerning the late Indian fight on Crooked river We make the following extracts

Capt McKay arrived here to day and informs us that on the 7th of January they came up a band of Snake Indians on Crooked river and attacked them about 2 P M Their detachment consisted of forty men the Indians numbering about one hundred and fifty The Indians were fortified on the rocks and had the advantage of ground The fight lasted until dark Six Snake were killed and two taken prisoners A few horses and mules were captured Not having rations to follow the marauders the command had to return to camp One man was slightly wounded and two horses were shot not however, disabling them

Having returned to their camp, which they call Camp Steele, and which is situated about four miles south of where the Lebanon road crosses Crooked river, they found it necessary to recruit their horses before attempting another movement.

This section of country is old Paulina s and Weawewa s winter camping ground, and to it they retire after their predatory excursions toward the Canyon City road They bring their booty to this place and subsist for the winter upon their plunder

On the 19th of January one of the men was out from the camp on the look out, and heard the report of several guns He went on and struck the trail of a Snake Indian who was in pursuit of game He found where he had killed and dressed a deer and immediately returned to camp and reported his discovery It was then dark, but everything was got in readiness for a night march Fifty men started out in the midst of a snow storm, and before day the spies reported that they saw camp fires ahead The scouts were commanded to leave their horses and great coats and proceed by stealth to the camp and surprise the Indians The Snakes had no idea that any one would be abroad on such a night to disturb them The men crept up so close as to cut them off from a fortification they had built, and when daylight opened commenced fire But one of the savages escaped, and he tumbled off down a precipice where no one but a Snake Indian could go

The command now divided into several bodies They attacked and put to flight other bands of Indians thoroughly searched the country and drove the remainder of the band to the mountains for safety The result of this work was the killing of twenty Indians and the capture of six, with four rifles and several pounds of powder and ball Capt McKay thinks that if he had had forage for his animals he would have wiped out the band of Indians entirely

Capts Darragh and McKay will continue to give a good account of themselves and their command

The Reorganization of the French Army —La France gives the following details of the bill adopted by the commission on the French national forces, in its last sitting

The national forces are divided into three classes, First, the active army, second, the reserve third, the movable national guard They will include all Frenchmen from twenty to twenty nine years of age capable of bearing arms The time of service in the active army and in the reserve is reduced to six years At the expiration of that time, the men pass from the ranks of the active army and the reserve into those of the movable national guard, and are bound to give special service during three years

The active army is permanent It is organized without any modification on the present system, and will serve both in time of war and peace The reserve is divided into two "bans" the first of which may be called upon to fill up the gaps in the active army, and the second of which can only be called on in time of war

The movable national guard is destined in time of war for service, and the defense of fortresses

Exoneration is admitted for the active army, but the number of those who can be exonerated is limited each year, according to the number of re-enlistments the preceding year

No one can be exempted from the reserve or the movable national guard

Exchanges will be allowed between soldiers in the active army and those in the reserve

The recruits of the reserve will be subject to musterings and periodical drillings to learn the use of arms But these duties will be arranged so as not to require expensive removals, and not to inconvenience useful professions

The annual contingent for the active army will be recruited as at present, and will consist of 80,000 men

The surplus of the young men called each year and acknowledged fit for service will form the contingent of the reserve

Of the 326,000 young men enrolled annually in each class only 160 000 are considered fit for service The contingent of the reserve will therefore be 80,000 strong, like that of the active army

This double contingent, forming yearly a total of 160 000 will give in six years a permanent army of 416 000 men and a reserve of 325 000

The effective force of the movable national guard will amount to about 200,000

The reserve not causing but a small outlay for the instruction of the recruits the army estimates will not be sensibly changed by the new system

It will be seen from these general data, says La France, that the object of the Legislature is to increase the defensive force of France without altering the organization of the regular army, by establishing the principle of equality in the matter of patriotism, and by maintaining the balance of our finances

A Miraculous Escape —The English papers publish the following account of the escape from the explosion in the Oaks pit

Soon after four o'clock on Friday morning the policeman on duty at the Oaks pit's mouth was startled to hear a slight movement of the signal wire in No 2 shaft, accompanied by a slight tingle of the bell attached to it in the engine house Engineers and medical men were summoned to the spot and in the meantime Inspector Wotherall rigged up some bell wire and sent a large flask of tea and brandy to the bottom of the shaft When the wire was withdrawn, it was found that the flask had been removed the signal was no illusion, and the excitement and anxiety that immediately followed the occurrence of the accident were in part renewed

The third explosion on the previous day had so far damaged the headgear that it could not be used and a wire rope had to be fitted on a pulley over the pit s mouth A small iron tub about two feet square, was attached to the rope, and in this rude and dangerous contrivance two mining engineers, Mr Mammatt and Mr Embleton, slowly descended the shaft In about twenty minutes they reached the bottom, where they discovered a miner named Samuel Brown, who was supposed to have been killed on the previous day The poor fellow was much exhausted and it was found to be no easy task to balance him in the rickety little tub which brought the men and his heroic deliverers to the surface On reaching the pit s bank Brown was handed to the care of several medical men and there is every reason to hope that he will ultimately recover

He states that when the second explosion happened, he was some distance from the bottom of the shaft, and avoided the fury of the blast by hiding in a sheltered recess The explosion however, rendered him insensible and he remained in a state of stupefaction for several hours He heard nothing of the third explosion and when he recovered consciousness he groped his way to the bottom of the shaft This was no easy task the air was loaded with noxious gas, the roadways were filled with debris and the awful sensations of the situation were intensified by stumbling now and then over the dead body of some comrade When he reached the bottom of the shaft he was for a time unable to find the signal wire but it was at last seen by the light of a few sparks which fell down No 1 shaft Brown reports that he heard no moaning and observed no sign of any other living person being in the pit An escape so extraordinary is probably without parallel

Prices for real estate in Louisiana are improving in spite of the fact that there have been and still are a great many suits foreclosing mortgages and collection of claims In most cases property is bringing its full value, when a year ago hardly fifty per cent. of it could be got for it at forced sale

The Great Storm in Southern Oregon

We obtain the following additional information about the ravages of the great storm in Southern Oregon from the Jacksonville Press of the 26th ult The Press comes to us almost reduced to pulp —pretty good evidence of the severity of the storm

The storm which raged in this region during the greater part of last week and the early part of this is almost unexampled in this region and in every direction as far as we have any communication its effects have been very disastrous During the early part of last week and for some days previously considerable snow fell in the mountainous regions around us which was followed by a warm continuous rain which lasted until about noon on Monday last This caused unusually heavy freshets in all the streams and ravines to the north south and west of us, flooding nearly the whole valley tearing up the roads, carrying off bridges, destroying fences and overrunning and cutting away large tracts of rich and valuable land from many of the farms bordering on the various streams No stages have arrived or departed from this place from Friday the 18th up to the present writing The ravines and gullies between this and Willow Springs over which the Oregon road passes, poured down raging torrents carrying off nearly every one of the bridges, and cutting deep and dangerous channels in the road At one time it was reported that Rock Point bridge had been carried away also the Evans' Creek bridge, but fortunately this is not the case Cow Creek bridge was, however, carried away Both the ferries on Rogue River have been partially destroyed Last fall Mr Bybee, proprietor of the upper ferry, stretched a large wire rope across the river at that point, but the trees to which it was attached (immense ones, at that) were washed out by the roots, and the rope lays somewhere in the bed of the river The same misfortune occurred at Vannoy's ferry Very serious damage was done to property all along the banks of Rogue River

To the west on the Crescent City road, the streams were higher than was ever known On Slate creek the bridge was carried away and an immense amount of property destroyed along its course to its mouth The same is the case on Applegate On Illinois river the freshet made ravages breaking from its own channel, overrunning a large amount of valuable property, and cutting for itself a new channel—the bridge that formerly spanned that stream being now stretched over dry land

South of us communication was stopped beyond Eagle Mills, on account of the overflow of Bear Creek near that point, cutting up the road along the bottom, and making it totally impassable for stages, and extremely perilous to attempt it under any circumstances All the little bridges spanning dikes or rivulets on this road also have been torn up and washed away

In our immediate vicinity the destruction of property has been very great On Thursday of last week Jackson creek commenced assuming a threatening aspect as it dashed and foamed under the bridge on Oregon street. As the rain continued the snow kept melting and the stream increased in force and volume, threatening to sweep away the lower portion of the town To give our readers at a distance some idea of the character and condition of this stream, we will state that for the last sixteen years extensive mining operations have been carried on along Jackson creek its banks and its tributaries and the accumulation of tailings and debris along its course from season to season has been so great as to have filled the original bed of the creek in the vicinity of town to a depth of from 12 to 20 feet, which has caused the stream to overflow the banks and gradually encroach upon the improved property along its course During the last half dozen winters it changed its course as many times, carrying off or demolishing dwellings and fences, and laying waste and filling in beautiful gardens, so that now a large portion of what was once the prettiest part of the town is nothing but a vast waste of gravel, boulders, decomposed stumps and brush All this might easily have been avoided if the owners of property in the vicinity of the creek had only taken timely precautions and confined the water to its proper and natural channel, by assisting it, at the commencement of each winter, to carry off the deposits of gravel accumulated in its bed during the subsidence of the water the preceding spring This important matter was neglected, and the result is that greater damage has been done this winter than ever before During the past week the water overrun whole blocks at a time, the whole of the lower part of town was inundated, fine gardens were destroyed houses were undermined and almost carried off bodily—families having to flee from them for safety At one time quite a large stream poured down C street, and Plymale's stable was in imminent danger the firmness of its foundation saved it The principal sufferer, in town, by the freshet, we believe is Mr Roudebush who lives just above the bridge, about one third of his garden having been carried away, including many valuable fruit trees On Sunday night it was thought his house would be carried away and his furniture was hastily removed to a place of safety by his friends, fortunately the storm abated before the water had time to carry away the foundation Mr Hall also suffered heavily, his fine garden having been gutted by the swollen streams which spread in every direction carrying destruction on their course The bulkhead built by the Messrs Cluggage at the foot of Fourth street was demolished Mr Obar s barn, and Dr Robinson's also on Fifth street, were carried away The new, stout stockade fence around Plymale's stable was actually beaten to pieces by the force of the water, as was that around the residence of Mr Neil while the fence garden, and everything around Mr Wade s residence was totally destroyed This is only a tithe of the damage to town property that has resulted from the negligence of the owners (with a few exceptions) to prepare for such emergencies

What the farmers below town have suffered we have not yet learned, but it must have been considerable The only persons who have reaped any benefit from the storm are a few of the mining companies on the creek—the majority of them have suffered considerable loss in flumes, filling up of claims, etc

On the East side of town considerable damage was done by the freshet from Rich Gulch, owing to the choking up of the channel by drift during the night The residences of Messrs Fay, Jacobs, Judge and others, suffered considerably—the lots surrounding some of them being covered with water to the depth of eighteen inches The brick foundation of Mr Judge s dwelling (so recently erected) was undermined and the cellar caved in Part of the overflow from Rich Gulch also made its way through the garden of Mr Bilger, doing much damage

Unless the town authorities take the matter in hand, another winter will totally ruin the lower part of the town Let them see to it promptly

Importance of Tennessee

The Nashville Press and Times, speaking of the importance of Tennessee to the National Republican party, truly remarks

The Republicans of this State through the agency of the present legislature have it in their power to wholly destroy the unity of the Southern sectional party that pestilent organization whose strength exists entirely in its geographical location and whose rankling poison envenoms all the waters of Nile. Tennessee was the keystone of the Confederate arch in the beginning of rebellion it was the grand geographical centre of the Southern circle, the hub of the slave Confederacy

Here it is evident that the very life of the present Johnson Democratic sectional Southern party depends upon the possession of Tennessee If she be Republicanized it is utterly impossible for the geographical party of the South to exist The Republicans of the North must see that the possession of Tennessee is of the first importance to the security of their triumph, and the utter annihilation of Southern faction To Republicans this State is to explode the Johnson rebel party at once which can never reunite Beyond all question Tennessee is of more value to the National Republican party than any three or four of the remaining Southern States To Republicanize South Carolina or Georgia would be to take from the Southern party only the segment of a circle, while to Republicanize Tennessee is to break the main centre out of the circle and force the circumference to fall to pieces It is to destroy the keystone of the Confederate arch

Let the legislature also keep it in view, and use every exertion to give the death blow to the damnable sectional party which has so long outraged and oppressed men and made a hell of the loveliest portion of the State Let the legislature lay the Southern hydra of old, and the nation will bless it forever as its great benefactor

Thad Stevens from a Southern Point of View

We have lavished a vast deal of abuse on Thad Stevens and his friends in Congress without allowing that the principle figure in the group had a single redeeming feature Our people have been flattered with the picture of this man as an old, uncouth badly executed and vindictive demagogue from the backwoods of Pennsylvania holding office and wielding influence simply by the force of his ultra opinions, and the obstinacy with which he maintained them His violence has been attributed to losses incurred by himself during the war We committed the same error of judgment in the outset of the war, by discrediting the willingness or capacity of the North to prosecute the effort to subjugate the South and we made a similar mistake in supposing that any considerable minority of the Northern people would forcibly resist the attempt to coerce the seceded States The immense calamities which have resulted to us from the two first mistakes should induce us to hesitate before forming conclusions that time and experience may disprove, possibly after great evils have resulted Let us form correct estimates of men and things before we decide on their worth Give to Stevens all the credit he deserves, and then we shall be better able to determine what degree of evil he can inflict upon us We owe it to ourselves to measure forces—the brute and the bully are wise enough to do so, and shall we be less provident than they? Stevens is a lawyer of ability and a politician of great energy, an educated man and a great thinker There is no doubt of this. His position in Congress fixes his capacity He is a leading man in Pennsylvania by the sheer force of his intellect, and his ideas are accepted with readiness by the Northern people He is a leader of the masses, and no one of his enemies even accuse him of being less than a fool or more than a fanatic Knavery is not charged to his account as it is to Butler's, he is not a chameleon as Raymond is. We know his position, and that he will hold it. It is proper that we should understand such a man and how he can be moved It is possible that the South has made a mistake in Stevens, as she did in Johnson Probably she has not made allowances for his earnest nature, which, like our own impassioned speeches, say more than the head will enforce His oratory is fervent and his sentences may be extravagant We may find him a better friend then some who bid higher for our influence He has but recently defended Jefferson Davis from the assaults of malice and injustice His fury withered petty opposition toward a captive with equal indignation that it blazed against recreant secessionists He proclaimed justice to the Confederate leader with the same vehemence that he demanded it for the freedmen Conscience opposed an ex post facto law for the injury of Davis, and announced that no man could be punished as a traitor for secession, because the law did not reach the case Perhaps he is a better man than the South has been lectured to believe If he proves to be a friend, may we not accept him as we did the President?—N O Commercial.

Mysterious Murder in New Orleans —A letter from New Orleans, under date of December 13th, gives the following account of a shocking murder "A young girl named Elizabeth Hendricks, whose parents reside at Mandeville, across the lake, was boarding in the city and attending school She appears to have been much admired by Mr McLinn and his family, with whom she was boarding, and to have been a favorite with her schoolmates She retired Saturday night about eleven o'clock, after sitting with the family engaged in sewing. In the morning one of the family rapped at her door, but received no response Later, as she did not appear, they rapped again, and not hearing any sound Mrs McLinn looked over the door and saw blood upon the floor The door was then broken open, and the unfortunate girl was found insensible, but still living There was a large gash on the back of her head, and a smoothing iron, stained with blood, was lying near Miss Hendricks never recovered her sensibility, and died in a few hours. The house is a low one story building, the window of the room in which the girl slept opening upon an alley way Some few things were missing, but although Mr McLinn's clothing was hanging in the room, nothing but female clothing was taken There were some tracks discovered on the brick dust in the alley, showing a very small and narrow foot, like a lady's gaiter The assassin entered the window undoubtedly, but there are some singular circumstances connected with the affair. If the blow was given while Miss Hendricks was in bed, how came she to be lying near the door? If she was struck when trying to give the alarm how was it that no voice was heard by the family who slept in the adjoining room, separated by a thin partition? The young girl was known to have no intimate associates, and there can be no imaginable reasons given for the perpetration of the crime Some of the facts seem to show that the deed was committed by a woman but on the other hand it seems almost impossible that a woman could have climbed into the alley way and into the window An examination by medical men showed that no violence had been committed other than the blow upon the head and it is inferred that robbery was the object of the assassin, and the murder unpremeditated

Russia Arming —A Warsaw letter of Dec 8th contains the following

Russia is secretly arming to a considerable extent the fact is undeniable An incredible activity prevails in her arsenals, she is converting the old infantry muskets into needle rifles and filling up the regiments, in short, she is putting herself in a condition to be prepared for any event next spring The superior officers believe they will be called upon to enter on a campaign at that period

However, it is only stating the truth to say that up to the present no change has been made in the cantonments of the Russian army, and that the military force has not been increased in the kingdom of Poland The Austrian frontier is as barren of Russian troops as in ordinary times A considerable number of young men, natives of Galicia who had taken part in the last Polish insurrection have just passed through Warsaw They had been sent to Siberia, but the Russian government, at the instance of the Cabinet of Vienna has lately set them at liberty, and they are returning to their homes Scarcely half of these young men it is perceived with regret have come back the others found their death in Siberia, as much from the journey and the climate as from the painful labor to which they were subjected.

Brigham Young's Last Wife —A certain Dr Adonis, who formerly resided at Milwaukee is now at Salt Lake from which city he writes back to a friend

I saw the President's last wife at the Tabernacle on Sunday last The lady s name ere marriage was Maria Folsom Her former residence was at Council Bluffs, Iowa She is an imperious looking young beauty of the Grecian rather than the Roman order, and is very jealous Like all passionate and jealous women, she is noble hearted Miss Folsom is Brigham s last wife and pet Two of the President s daughters play at the theatre and are great favorites with the Gentile portion of the community One is married Mrs Clawson, and the other, Miss Jane, is single but is being waited on by a distinguished editor Ah you ought to be out here—the Mormons are just the best people in the world I have not learned the exact number of wives and children President Young has, but altogether he has the largest family of any man living in the civilized world to day

Dead Bodies Discovered in Boston —A Boston dispatch of January 1st gives the following

A mysterious and diabolical affair has just come to light On Friday a box was shipped as merchandise at Philadelphia for this port on the steamer Saxon and marked "Edward Mason Portland Maine" The shipper said it would be claimed at Boston The box was accidentally broken open here and on examination found to contain three dead bodies, two men and a woman, apparently aged about thirty five years The throats of the woman and one of the men had been cut but no marks of violence were discovered on the other The police believe they were all murdered A dispatch to "Edward Mason Portland Maine" has not been answered At present the matter is wrapped in mystery

Transfer of the Indian Bureau to the War Department

So far as we can learn by telegraph, it appears that Congress has determined to transfer the "Indian Bureau" to the War Department. We are pleased to see this and congratulate the country on the change. This "Indian Business" has been a nuisance and a humbug from the start. Nothing has been accomplished worth mentioning towards civilizing and Christianizing the red man. For our failure in this respect the Indian is probably more at fault than we. The humbug consists in pretending to do what we cannot now, and never will accomplish. The transfer of the Indian Agencies from the control of the military to civilians was brought about we believe upon the plea of putting the Indians under the control of religious men who would live among them as missionaries and encourage them in civilization. But this part of the project was never realized on this coast, and the same rule doubtless prevails elsewhere. An Indian Agent is generally some county politician who has made himself agreeable or serviceable to a member of Congress. He takes his place as a reward for political services, either actual or expected, and makes what money he can out of it. In the expenditure of the Indian funds and the disposition of his own time and talents he is expected to do what he can to advance the interest of his party, and particularly of his political master to whom he owes his appointment or retention in office. The Indians are a mere incident of this political machinery, and Agents selected in this way and for this purpose,—expecting only to retain their places while they can be useful to the member of Congress to whom their fortunes are tied,—do just what most men would do under like circumstances. They keep a sharp eye on Washington, and endeavor to control the politics of their locality, get rich as fast as they can, and "accept their resignation" when it is sent them.

These remarks are general, and not intended for any particular person. Occasionally an Agent does better than this, but he is a worthy and infrequent exception. We have no one now in our mind who is above this standard, but will call no names, good or bad.

Few, however, will suppose that the transfer of the Indians to the military will better the conditions of the race so far as civilizing them is concerned. In this respect the civilians are fully equal to the officers who command on our frontier posts. But as an economical measure, the advantage of the transfer will be great. The army is on permanent pay, and in time of peace has little to do except to tie and untie "red tape." They may as well superintend Indians as do nothing. The transfer will operate to divorce the "Indian Business" from politics. This alone will decrease the expenses one-half, and improve the morals of our politics in like ratio. The army officers are, to some extent at least, above the temptation, and can afford to be honest in this respect. Of the corrupt influence which this jobbery has upon politics, it would be easy to mention instances enough, but they are so notorious that this unnecessary.

Baying at the Moon.

The Democratic Committee of Washington Territory has issued an address to the people in which the following moving appeal is made:

> Are you prepared to submit, without protest to that indignity which, while you willingly contribute taxes, though denied a vote in Congress, even takes away from you the privilege of controlling your elective franchise? Remember that the acts organizing our Territory, and inviting its settlement years ago, conferred the express right to define the qualifications of electors, and opened the public lands to white settlement. After fourteen years acceptance of these fundamental laws, without offense on our part, Congress has deprived us of those privileges. Without our consent and against our will, it has forced upon us negro suffrage, and has opened the door for all races and colors to vote in our Territory and settle in our midst. Those who favor repeal of such oppressive Congressional legislation, come forward now and let your voice be heard in earnest protest against such interference in our affairs.

With men who talk in this way, of course it is useless to attempt an argument. They cannot be made to understand that there is any difference between States and Territories, or that Congress has any power over the latter which it does not possess over the former. It would be idle to attempt to convince them that the territory belonging to the United States is subject exclusively to the control of Congress, and that it always has been so. They find it convenient to ignore these facts. They are not aware that the Territories have Legislatures only by consent of the General Government, and that if Congress chooses to do so, it can annul all their legislation. Congress has always exercised its right to legislate for the Territories on every subject which, in its judgment, required legislation, and always will exercise it, the Democratic Committee of Washington Territory to the contrary notwithstanding. And as that Committee has denied the jurisdiction of Congress over the national territory, perhaps it had better go one step further and appeal to the Democratic party of the great Territory of Washington to fall back on their reserved rights, to resume their delegated powers, and to secede from the "oppressive Abolition Government." This is merely recommended as a remedy. That party, from its past experience in the business, knows how to apply it.

The "call" from which the above is an extract, exhorts all who favor the repeal of "such oppressive legislation" to come forward now, and act with the Democratic party. We confess we are somewhat puzzled to decide what this means. Suppose the Democrats carry the election in that Territory, what then? Do they imagine this will induce Congress to repeal its legislation? A wonderful effect it will have, certainly! Their delegate in Congress, without a vote, will surely achieve wonders! Here is a party making an issue against negro suffrage in a Territory, when the result of their election, whether it turns the one way or the other will have no more effect upon the question than old king Canute's commands had upon the rising sea. Like the dog in the fable, they might as well bay at the moon.

But perhaps the language of this impassioned appeal is to be taken in another sense. Perhaps they mean themselves to "repeal this oppressive Congressional legislation." This is the more probable interpretation, for in this way only can they obtain the repeal they demand. Therefore the Democratic party of Washington Territory is going into the canvass on a single great issue. If the election goes in their favor, they will repeal this odious act of Congress, and vindicate their superiority over "buck-niggers, half breeds, and lousy Indians," with which classes their organ declares they are now on an equality. Great is Democracy in the great Territory of Washington!

But there is yet another difficulty. President Johnson pronounces for negro suffrage too. Have his supporters and admirers in Washington Territory seen his last manifesto? Negro suffrage, both in States and Territories, is his ticket. Beset with all these difficulties the "unterrified," beyond the big river, may as well give up in despair!

Congress, it is understood, has lately passed an act which requires that a copy of every book, map, chart, photograph or engraving copyrighted under the laws of the United States, shall be sent to the Congressional Library at Washington for preservation. Such a collection of literature will, in after times, possess an immense value.

Howe, of Wisconsin, spoke in favor of the amendment, contending that under the Constitution officers of the Government could not be removed except on impeachment. The only question that ought to be put to the candidate for office were those touching his capability for the position.

Johnson, of Maryland, spoke in opposition to the amendment, and supported the right of the President to appoint and remove cabinet officers.

Doolittle, of Wisconsin, spoke in a similar strain.

Buckalew, of Pennsylvania, supported the amendment.

Sherman, of Ohio, doubted the propriety of the amendment, as under it the President would have to retain in office the cabinet of his predecessor until the Senate consented to the removal, though they might be politically opposed to him.

After further debate the amendment was rejected—ayes 10, noes 28.

The Senate have disagreed upon the House amendment. The bill must go to a committee of conference. Adjourned.

In the House the Speaker presented a message from the President transmitting the report of the Secretary of State as to the number of States which had ratified the constitutional amendment. On motion of Stevens of Pennsylvania, the amendment was tabled—ayes 72, noes 66. Jencks changed his vote to aye and moved a reconsideration but withdrew it to allow Thad Stevens to report from the reconstruction committee a bill providing as follows:

WHEREAS, Pretended State Governments were set up without the sanction of the people, and

WHEREAS, These pretended Governments appear no protection to life or property and encourage lawlessness and crime; and

WHEREAS, It is necessary that peace and good order should be enforced in the so called States until loyal State Governments can be legally established; therefore

Be it enacted, That the so-called States shall be divided into military districts and made subject to the military authority of the United States. For that purpose the Virginia shall constitute the first district; North Carolina and South Carolina, the second district; Georgia, Alabama and Florida, the 3d district; Mississippi and Arkansas the fourth district, and Louisiana and Texas, the fifth district.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Senator Fowler caused a dispatch to be read announcing that the Tennessee Assembly had passed the negro suffrage bill.

New Steam Plough.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7th.—The Times' special says John Fowler & Co. of England have sent here a complete set of steam ploughing apparatus, in charge of an overseer, which is capable of ploughing over an acre an hour to a depth of twelve inches. The cost is less by considerable than by horse and hand labor. It is thought it will be adopted by a large number of California farmers. The Custom House has levied duty on this sample of nearly $400. Mr. Bidwell offered a joint resolution refunding this, which was immediately adopted.

The World declares the military reconstruction bill impracticable. It regards the scheme as an abandonment of the effort to impeach the President, and expects the bill will pass, and the Supreme Court decide it illegal because it suspends the habeas corpus in time of peace.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Advices received to-night indicate fresh complications of the eastern question. Servia is arming against the Turks. The peace party at Constantinople is increasing in numbers and influence. The Viceroy of Egypt has sent an agent to ascertain whether the leading powers of Europe would favor his complete independence.

London telegrams say great preparations are making for reform demonstration on the 11th. The bitterness of popular feeling is tremendous. Even personal regard for the Queen is eclipsed by the reform furore. The cards are headed with the motto "Men without votes are serfs." The Queen has probably opened Parliament for the last time, and it is understood she has resolved not to appear in a series of royal public receptions.

The President, having broken the silence he has kept ever since his return from his progress, will probably begin soon to make public speeches again. He is no doubt loosening his tongue for service on the 22d of February—now near at hand. He knows a pleasing story about an Alderman, a Military Governor, and a person who has reached the summit of his ambition, with which story the country will probably soon be delighted again.

THE AVITOR.—Speaking of the proposed new flying machine, the San Francisco News Letter says:

We repeat that we entertain a profound faith in the soundness and practicability of the principle which it is now attempted to apply. We know that it is sound. We know that it is practicable. Stephenson or Fulton did not proceed to the consummation of their triumphant success with a more perfect reliance upon themselves or confidence in results. The old notion of ballooning has been all a mistake, the new notion is palpably practicable the moment it is known. Not a single person to whom it has yet been communicated but has instantly expressed his conviction of its correctness, and as we dwell for a moment on the thought of aerial navigation as a success achieved, a triumph of invention and skill whose habitual use shall have lowered it with us to the common place, our soul expands with the thought of the triumphs of geographical, meteorologic, astronomical discovery which will be opened up to the enterprise and daring of man! Right to the heart of Kane's open polar sea, or Speke and Baker's grand Nyanzas, to the now inaccessible summits of Cordillera and Himmalaya, over ocean and continent, plain and mountain, pathless forest and trackless desert man will navigate the air ocean, and the next great maps of the world shall depicture with equal certainty the innermost nook of Africa, the vast face of the Russian Steppe, the unpenetrated Brazilian forest, and the indented shore line of the Antarctic continent. Is there not about this prospect something glorious, something almost sublime? Can any reader realize, and convince himself that he realizes, that within a few weeks the experiment will be made here in this comparatively obscure corner of the globe, which shall transfer all this from the domain of possibility to that of certainty which shall soon remit it to the department of history? When he does realize it, and not till he realizes it, can he enter into the feelings with which we say that we believe it is about to be done. And when done, California—as the birth place of aerial navigation—will take higher rank in the world of civilization and occupy a larger space in that history than all that gold and wealth can win for her. Nor can any good citizen, good American, or good man refuse to offer up from his heart the brief prayer—God speed the Avitor.

SUCCESSFUL BURGLARY—STOWELL, CHAMBERLAIN & CO.'S SAFE BLOWN OPEN AND ROBBED.—Our town was startled on Friday morning by the discovery of a great burglary in the Banking Office of Messrs. Stowell, Chamberlain & Co. The safe was a double one made by Lewis Lillie & Son of the largest size, weighing many thousand pounds. The burglars obtained an entrance into the office by prying open one of the windows with a jimmy. In the lower left hand corner of the right hand outer door of the safe which was two inches thick, a hole was drilled through which powder was introduced. It was blown open separating the outside from the bolts and inside casing, rendering it a complete wreck. The lower hinges of both doors were broken off. They next attacked the inside safe which was two feet high, extending the width and depth of the inside of the main safe. This safe was one and a half inches thick, made with folding doors. They drilled another hole through the right hand door in nearly the same point they had on the outside safe blowing open both doors. This gave them access to the money and bonds, amounting to twenty five thousand dollars which they carried off. The larger portion of this belonged to special depositors. They also took valuable papers belonging to the firm, leaving in their flight a bag of gold and silver, also a hundred dollar bill. This safe was made to order by Mr. Lillie of chilled iron, and was supposed to be burglar proof, as it was a double safe, one inside the other, with Lillie's combination locks on the outside and inside doors. No trace of the burglars has been discovered. They came well prepared with jimmies, drills, gunpowder, &c. The clerk of the bank did not leave there until twelve o'clock at night. The explosion was heard about four in the morning, showing they were expeditious in their work.

Fountain of Life!
THE
GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER!

IN EVERY PROGRESSIVE SCIENCE PERIODS ARRIVE when a new direction is imparted to the [illegible]. These epochs succeed from discovery of some [illegible] light which changes the whole aspect of the science. The present is an epoch of this kind. The Great Remedy now offered to the public, in connection with the theory on which it is based, is destined to effect an entire revolution in the treatment of the diseases of

by eradicating the disease entirely from the blood. The FOUNTAIN OF LIFE is composed entirely of vegetable extracts. It contains no Mercury or other mineral substance.

The Proprietor and Discoverer of this Sovereign Remedy CHALLENGES THE WORLD to furnish anything, from the days of Esculapius down to the present time, in the arena of Medical Science, which can equal or excel the intrinsic properties of this Great Blood Purifier. Its value has been tested with the happiest effect in the most obstinate cases of Scrofula, that baffled the skill of the most eminent physicians in the world. No matter what form the dreadful disease of SCROFULA and KING'S EVIL may have assumed, it can in no way be more safely and certainly arrested in its progress than by HENLEY'S GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER. Thousands have been swept into their graves who, had they made a timely use of the FOUNTAIN OF LIFE, might now be enjoying the blessings of life and health. It requires an article of real merit and intrinsic value to sustain itself. During the stern ordeal of public experience the FOUNTAIN OF LIFE has stood the test trial of [illegible].

☞ Dr. HENLEY guarantees to CURE any case of SCROFULA or KING'S EVIL; he will [illegible] and eradicate the disease entirely from the system, or no charge is made—provided they will secure him his pay when they are cured.

FOR REFERENCE

I would refer you to L. L. Peck, of Portland, Mrs. Walter Moffitt and numbers of others as to what a miraculous effect it had in a short time, in cases that had baffled the skill of physicians for years.

The Examination of Kersting.—The name of the man arrested for the murder of C H Reicke is A[illegible] Kersting. His name has not before appeared correctly. He had his preliminary examination yesterday before Recorder Hoffman—Messrs Mulkey and Hill for the State and Messrs Caton and Dolph for the prisoner. We have full notes of the evidence introduced but at the request of the Prosecuting Attorney we refrain from publishing anything beyond the principal facts. The murdered man was found in his cabin dead, shot through the head by a bullet from a rifle. When found he was lying behind the door. Had been dragged there from the table standing at a distance of about ten feet. There was blood and brains on the floor near the table. The ball had entered near the left lateral border of the occipital bone, ranged downward coming out at the left eye and entering the wall about two feet from the floor. The man had evidently been sitting at the table. From the range of the ball it was evident that the man who fired it must have had the rifle up near his face. The hair was burned around the wound. The dead man had a small case knife in his hand. There was a trail of blood from his seat at the table to the place where he had been dragged. A basket and some boards had been put up at the window to obstruct the sight from the outside. A blanket was thrown over the bloody trail. When the house was first approached by the neighbors the door was locked. The appearance of the body indicated that it had been dead ten or twelve days. The discovery was made on the 30th of January. The prisoner had worked for Mr J Zimmerman previous to the 15th ult. On that day he paid prisoner some money to buy him some boots. He had paid him altogether $2 10. Prisoner told Mr Z that he had no other money. Had not seen prisoner since the 15th. Sometime before Mr Z had received from Reicke's brother in Portland $100, which he sent to Reicke by his boy and girl. Kersting was present when he gave the money to the boy and girl. The prisoner and the murdered man had been seen talking together after this. Prisoner had remarked once that "it was a wonder the old gray head had courage to live there alone." One of the watches and the rings which the prisoner had disposed of in this city, were recognized as the property of the murdered man. A day or two after the money was handed to the old man the prisoner inquired the way to his house, and said he was going there. He was seen there about noon on the 19th. He and Reicke were examining an account book. On the same day they were seen eating dinner together. One of the witnesses who lives near Reicke's had noticed that from about the 22d no smoke had issued from the old man's chimney. Witness went to the house, looked in at the window. Things were just about as when the murder was discovered—the blanket on the floor, basket and planks up at the window. Had heard the report of a gun the night of the 22d or 23d. The report was in the direction of the old man's house. Missed the smoke from his chimney next morning. The prisoner sold the watches and rings shown in court in Portland, about the time the snow came on. The prisoner was unequivocally identified as the man who sold them. Several of the witnesses identified the articles in court as the same they had known the murdered man to have. Reicke had been known to say he "would not take any money" for the rings; would not sell them.

Without submitting evidence of the prisoner's previous confessions, the prosecution rested, and the court committed the prisoner till the action of the Grand Jury can be had.

Debating Club.—East Portland has a well organized Debating Club which has been in existence for some time, and promises to become a permanent and useful institution. It has lately been making an effort to get a circulating library together, and is meeting with flattering success in that, having already within a short time, secured seventy five volumes. Its regular meetings are held on Saturday evenings. The East Portland Club recently challenged the "Occidental Club" of district No. 2, to meet them in debate and the meeting is arranged to take place on next Saturday evening at the room of the East Portland Club. One club selects the subject and the other has choice of sides. The question for discussion Saturday evening is, "Resolved, That the condition of the negro was better before the war than it is now."

As We Supposed.—We were informed, yesterday, by a person who knows him, that the Vincent mentioned in the Alta California as a "Webfoot"—arrested for stealing $200 of a fellow boarder and of whom we made mention yesterday—is not and never was an Oregonian and never lived in Oregon, only while at Portland waiting for a few days for a steamer. He was originally a Baltimore Plug Ugly, and lately a contraband cattle dealer in Idaho and left there to avoid the inconvenience of falling into the hands of a vigilance committee. It is more than probable that his companions are much the same stripe and equally innocent of hailing from Oregon. Vincent had lived for some time at San Francisco, and enlisted there as a soldier in 1862.

Horse and Cart Overboard.—One of the street cleaners got on a spree on Wednesday evening and while in a state of salubrity, managed to back his horse and cart into the ravine at the bridge on Front street. Everything being lovely with the driver, he reasoned that it must [illegible] be so with the horse, notwithstanding the immense bed of mud into which he had floundered, and so the driver went his way leaving his horse to ruminate on the ups and downs of equine life. Yesterday morning however, the driver being less salubrious, procured some help and got his horse out, but the poor animal was nearly chilled to death.

Freight for San Francisco.—The Montana, Feb 7th took out the following freight for San Francisco: 10,829 qr sks flour, 2,741 boxes fruit, 24 cases furniture, 20 cases mdse, 3 bbls mdse, 1 bale mdse, 9 bales wool, 14 rolls leather, 10 flasks quicksilver, 2 bundles deer skins, 40 bbls corned beef, 4,824 bbls in shooks, 22,725 oak staves, 120 oak bolts, 142,500 cedar shingles.

The Oriflamme same date, took the following freight: 17,267 qr sks flour, 698 boxes apples, 14 bales hay, 10 kegs dried fruit, 77 hides, 68 pkgs mdse, 2 horses, 31 pkgs eggs.

Funny.—On yesterday, the proprietor of the "Howard House," stepped out of his front door and as he did so, John Chinaman standing near by, stepped in. While the proprietor walked away from his till behind the bar, John Chinaman walked toward it. John cast his eye toward the till, the proprietor's wife cast her eyes toward John. John was about to muzzle the till, the proprietress muzzled John. John wanted to go, proprietress didn't want John to go. John struggled; proprietress held on till proprietor came in. The result was John went with [illegible] to jail and will be up this morning.

[illegible] Indignation.—Yesterday morning, the brother of Reicke, the murdered man, was standing at the foot of the stairs at the Police Court, when the officer arrived with the murderer, Kersting, in charge. Some one remarked "There comes the murderer now." whereupon Reicke, instantly became intensely angry, and as the man approached, he made for him with clenched fist, and was only prevented from assaulting the prisoner by the interposition of the officer.

Changes its Name.—Mr. Quimby, the present lessee of the Lincoln House, yesterday, took down that name and will shortly substitute the new title of "The American Exchange." We do not look upon this as a matter of any importance—there is not much in a name, the house and the landlord are the material considerations with the public. Mr Quimby has made many improvements already, and will make others as rapidly as possible. The "Exchange" will be a first class house, and no mistake.

I. O. G. T.—The following are the officers of Portland Lodge, No 20, I O G T, for the present term: B P Quivey, W C. T., Annie A. Pope, W V T., L. W Morgan, W S., Rena Brigman, W A S., I M Anderson, W T., D Cole, W F S., S A Moreland, W M., Irena Quivey, W. Phoenix Insurance Company.—The Phoenix Fire Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., is one of the most reliable companies in the United States. Its income in proportion to its capital is greater than that of any of the other American Companies. The net gain of its business for the year ending in May 1866, was $136 310 73. This exhibit will convince insurers that no safer Company can be found. By referring to the advertisement which appears elsewhere in this paper, an idea may be gathered of the extent of the Company's business and of their excellent facilities for securing, all who may desire insurance against losses by fire. Mr Bird, the Special Agent of the Company, is at present in the city.

Lecture.—The second lecture in the Citizens' Course, for the benefit of the Congregational Church, will take place Saturday evening, Feb 9th at Oro Fino Hall. Mr J H Stinson will deliver a lecture on the subject of "Woman's Love"—a fruitful and withal a somewhat interesting subject.

Canvass of the City.—Mr D P Dwight will begin the canvass of this city to-day to procure subscriptions to the Unionist newspaper, at Salem, and advertisements and subscribers for the forthcoming Salem Directory, to be published by W A McPherson & Co.

Tried once Before.—A man who was about the Recorder's office yesterday, and who professes to know Kersting very well says he was tried once before in the northern country for killing his partner.

Misstatements Corrected

Bad Roads.—Those living South of this city report the roads to be in a worse condition than ever before since their location. There are many causes which assisted in the bringing about of this state of things. In the first place almost every man living along the line of the road has at some time or another been allowed to re-locate it to suit his convenience, thereby throwing away the labor and money expended and commencing anew, where in some places it is almost impossible to construct a good road at any reasonable cost. Again the road laws are faulty in some respects. Instead of intrusting the work to an irresponsible farmer, contracts should be let and the work done under the supervision and direction of the County Surveyor. It is impossible to name the vast amount of money already expended by the people of this county upon that portion of the Salem road within the limits of this county being a distance of about six miles. Thousands of dollars have been expended year after year without any lasting result. Bridges were built that were ready to fall down before they were completed; roads were cut through wet lands without any calculation being made for drainage and finally when the whole road was corduroyed the County Commissioners had it re-located. The work done on this new section of road was done so poorly on account of the lack of money that it is now totally impassable for a loaded wagon, and dangerous at all times. Such roads retard the growth of cities, and the time has now arrived when some steps must be taken to remedy this great evil. People talk glibly of what farmers might or ought to do but they never take into consideration the fact that farmers cannot haul their produce to market for want of roads. We venture to assert that enough money has been thrown away on the first six miles of the Salem road leading out of this city, to build the same length of McAdamized road and twice its width and to build a stone bridge over stream and gulch along the line. This patching business which is so peculiar to Oregon is the bane of the county, and until some other mode of building roads is adopted there will not be a practical roadway in the country twenty years hence.—Daily Herald, January 27th

Editor Oregonian:

My attention has been called to the above article from the Herald of 27th ult, so utterly false and malicious in all its features, that I beg the privilege of a short reply. What motive induced the "Local" of the Herald to pen such statements is hard to determine, much harder than to disprove them. In the first place this much abused road, although so bad as to be a disgrace to a civilized people is yet no doubt, much the best continuous six miles of (county) road in the county, West of the river. His shafts are evidently leveled at the South half of it, between the Red House and county line because he says almost every man has been allowed to change it to suit himself, and the bridges have been suffered to rot down without being finished etc, thereby costing the county vast sums to keep it up. He also asserts that after the whole road has been corduroyed, the County Commissioners have re-located it, of course at a great sacrifice of interest to the county. Now, the facts are, that no portion of the old track has ever been changed from its original limits to suit anybody, and instead of costing such vast sums of money to the county, it was opened for travel, located and bridges built at individual expense, not costing the county one cent, and I think I am safe in saying, that it has not cost the county an average of $50 a year since for fourteen years—it having almost entirely been kept up by volunteer labor. The road has not been corduroyed as he states, not even one mile of it, and what he says of the new portion near the Red House, is simply false and without foundation. It is true that for want of time and funds it was left incomplete, but so far from being dangerous and impassable it has been much better during the present winter than the old track would have been. As regards the re-location by the County Commissioners, of which he complains, I have only to say, that if he prefers a grade of twelve degrees instead of four degrees, let him enjoy his opinion. He will find but few to agree with him.

Much more might be said, and ample proof given to show the falsity of such a slander upon this portion of road, but it is too well understood by the people to render it necessary.

The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise which commands here and in the markets of the interior, a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public, palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE. This fraud can deceive nobody after a trial but only adds to the favorable opinion of the consumers, the very flattering though unwilling testimony of the counterfeiters. Nevertheless buyers should be forewarned, and placed on their guard against this practice.

The Beaton Commander

Let him turn his face to the wall
 The man who trafficked in lives
Made little children fatherless
 And widowed contented wives

Let him turn his face to the wall
 Counting [illegible] tears
He never counted the blood drops
 [illegible] desolated years

Nor the glare of blazing homesteads
 White which the fields blackened in death,
Rapine murder and famine
 Hell let loose upon earth

All the curses of war time
 On both sides poured like rain
Curses for [illegible]
 None blessed—except the slain

And those whom he reckoned as grasses
 By the mower in a year is strown,
Why every one was a human life
 A life as good as his own

Let him wish that shamed life ended
 That death had covered defeat
But these lives cry out for vengeance
 From farm and village and street

Hear it, victor and vanquished
 Hear it over sea and land,
Ye neighbor realms whom it reaches
 As a murmur faint and bland

For if ye are deaf God listens
 And if ye are blind He sees
And mocks at your diplomacies
 Your child's play of war and peace

There is an Eternal Justice
 Although it may tarry long
Though the weak may appear down trampled
 And the right seem with the strong

But ye who in camp or council
 Go sowing war's bloody seed—
False patriotism sham glory
 Ambition and lustful greed—

Who stand by watching and stem not
 That fierce flowing crimson tide,
Know—there is a God who avengeth,
 As well as a Christ that died

The Pacific Railroad—Its Present Condition and Probable Routes

[From the New York Evening Post]

Very few persons are aware of the progress already made on the Pacific Railroad It is pushed forward as rapidly as skill and energy can do it During the past summer and autumn three large excursion parties went from the East to view the branches of the road, points of which have already been completed The initial eastern parts of these branches were Omaha, Atchison and Kansas City, the excursionists were composed of the leading men of our large cities, and a popular interest has been awakened in the subject commensurate with its importance But a few years ago it was deemed the sheerest folly even to suggest the building of a railroad over the Rocky Mountains and the Sierra Nevada, yet so much has been accomplished by successful engineering that about the first of December the track of the Central Pacific Railroad of California had been laid at the Sierra Nevada, and at the present time trains are running near to its very summit, seven thousand feet above the level of the sea, this is as high as Mount Washington.

A GENERAL VIEW.

Four distinct companies are now building the Pacific Railroad One company is building the Central Pacific of California, another the Union Pacific and its Omaha Branch, another the Atchison or Central Branch; another the Kansas or Southern Branch. Two other companies are formed to build branches—one from Sioux City and the other from the mouth of the Platte—but have done no work. The main line is from the hundredth meridian of longitude west from Greenwich, at a distance westward of Fort Kearny and northward of the boundary line between Kansas and Nebraska to Sacramento, California. This comprises the Central Pacific of California and the Union Pacific, which are to be built one to the east and the other to the west until they meet each other.

The five branches mentioned start from initial points on the Missouri river, and run Westward to join the main line at about the hundredth meridian The initial points on the Missouri are, commencing from the Northward, Sioux City, Omaha, the mouth of the Platte, Atchison and the mouth of the Kansas river. The first three points are in Nebraska, the last two in Kansas. A person traveling to the East will first take the Central Pacific of California, over the Sierra Nevadas, probably to the vicinity of Great Salt Lake, then the Union Pacific over the Rocky Mountains to the hundredth meridian, then either of the Eastern branches The Omaha branch will bring him to Omaha, and thence over the Iowa branch of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad to Chicago The Central or Atchison branch will bring him to Atchison, and thence over the Hannibal and St Joseph Railroad through Missouri, and over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad through Illinois to Chicago, or by two connections Eastward through St Louis and Cincinnati The Kansas river branch unless it should fail to become a branch of the Pacific Railroad at all, as is suggested hereafter, would bring him to Kansas city, thence by the Missouri Pacific to St Louis, and so on Eastward to Cincinnati Sioux City and the mouth of the Platte have no direct Eastern connections as yet, though the branch from the mouth of the Platte will be an extension of the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad

The Pacific Railroad has been roughly likened to a pitchfork with five prongs. The Central Pacific and the Union Pacific to the hundredth meridian will be the handle, the Eastern branches the tines. Commencing at the North, the first tine is the Sioux City and Pacific Railroad, the second the Omaha line, the third the mouth of the Platte branch, the fourth the Central or Atchison branch, the fifth the Kansas river branch.

HOW FAR THEY ARE BUILT.

The Central Pacific of California is built about one hundred miles eastward from Sacramento to the summit of the Sierra Nevada. The Union Pacific and Omaha Branch are owned by one company, and the road is built three hundred miles west from Omaha. The Atchison Branch is built three hundred miles west from Atchison. The Kansas River Branch is built one hundred and fifty miles, following Kansas river and the Smoky Hill Fork.

No work is done on the Sioux city and mouth of the Platte Branches

It may surprise our friends in the South to know that the Pacific Railroad was commenced and very far advanced during the war, when the country was straining every muscle in putting down the rebellion We have obtained from General Simpson, the President of the Board of Commissioners of the Pacific Railroad, a detailed and interesting statement of the condition of the work It is now stated that even at the rate at which it is going forward the whole line, from east to west will be completed in five years from the present time The limit of the time fixed by law is July 1, 1877. The Union Pacific from Omaha is the one on which the hardest work will be required, and Gen Dix expresses his belief that this road will be able to meet the Central Pacific of California by 1871. The work upon it, however, would be greatly facilitated if Congress would give the permission, which will probably be asked during this season, and which Gen Simpson recommends, which will enable workmen to be employed at each end of it The law at present allows them to work three hundred miles in advance of their continuous rail, but the hardest portions of their work are at the other end, and Salt Lake City is nearly eight hundred miles from the point to which the road is finished The Saints and the Gentiles at Great Salt Lake City are anxious to be employed on this road, and Congress will be asked to amend the Act of July 3, 1866, so that this may be done

THE DETAILS

The principal Acts of Congress in reference to the Pacific Railroad are those of July 1, 1862, of July 3, 1864, and July 4, 1866 By these Acts the construction is authorized of one main line commencing at Omaha, (Nebraska), the initial point fixed agreeably by law by President Lincoln and extending westward by the most direct and practicable line till it meets the Central Pacific Railroad of California, extending eastward from San Francisco These two roads are unrestricted as to the extent of their lines, except that they are to join in the most direct and practicable manner

THE CENTRAL PACIFIC OF CALIFORNIA

The work upon this road is being pushed forward with the greatest activity Between ten and twelve thousand Chinamen are now employed, and that force will be increased to fifteen thousand in the spring These laborers receive one dollar per day, and are very tractable and industrious This road as we have said, is finished to near the summit of the Sierra Nevada Besides the laborers, three hundred machines, nine hundred horses one hundred oxen and eight hundred wagons and carts have been employed in this work

The rise is constant and the highest grade used is the maximum authorized by law—one hundred and sixteen feet per mile Of this grade there are three and a half miles, and no difficulty is found in running the trains at nearly the regular speed The alignment is remarkable for its directness in such a mountainous and broken country. Some of the work on the mountain section of the road will be massive and grand including culverts, tunnels bridges etc, and the mountain and forest scenery will surpass that on every other line in the country A correspondent says the scenery is as grand as the Alps and as glorious as the Andes It blends the temperate and the torrid zones—the extinguished volcano of Shasta seems as if transplanted from the tropics with the appalling sublimity of the glacier bred Yo Semite On the railroad toward [illegible] along the side of a canyon two thousand feet from the creek below curling round its dizzy crest, four thousand feet above the level of the sea The towering pines the mountain peaks the yawning rifts and chasms present a sublime panorama On a clear day with a glass, the two valleys of Sacramento and San Joaquin are spread out like a map for three hundred miles and at sunset no unpainted dream of Claude Lorraine or Turner was ever more marvelously enchanting.

The road passes through a section of which the population is constantly increasing Thirty five miles from Sacramento there are extensive mines of crystalized iron ore and at Crystal Peak large beds of magnetic iron and also of bituminous coal, have been found within two miles of each other At Ieavine Mountain five miles from the road there are extensive copper mines The mineral wealth of the country is enormous Quarries of granite are also being opened and stone taken to San Francisco and other large cities for building purposes

The Company have received from New York thirty five first class locomotive engines and six hundred and seventy cars They are now erecting a machine and repair shop capable of building cars and locomotives equal to those received from the Atlantic States The rails are of the best American iron, as required by law The bridges are of red fir, from Oregon, with sills of redwood which is as durable as cedar The culverts are mostly granite or hard rock One culvert at the crossing of Canyon Creek, is a noble piece of solid masonry, twenty eight feet in height and fifty four feet in breadth, The laborers are now engaged night and day in three gangs each working eight hours, on two tunnels, one at the summit of the Sierra Nevadas, sixteen hundred feet long, and and another seven miles East of the Summit, nine hundred feet long

The line of the road is between the Big Bend of the Truckee river and Salt Lake City, and will be along the valley of the Humboldt the route recommended by General Simpson Though it is not the most direct route as it makes a detour to the Northward yet the grade is easy, not reaching over fifty three feet to the mile Leland Stanford, the President of the company expects to reach Great Salt Lake during the year 1870

THE UNION PACIFIC

The Union Pacific Railroad is properly said to start from the hundredth meridian of longitude west from Greenwich, and to proceed westward to join the Central Pacific of California at the most practicable point But the company organized by Congress to construct the Union Pacific was also authorized by the same act to build a branch from Omaha to the hundredth meridian, and both roads are therefore considered under this title Starting from Omaha it has been completed beyond the forks of the Platte to a bridge over the North Fork This is a distance of over three hundred miles

On the 1d of December last, the route of the California Overland Mail was changed to this road, so as to go by way of Chicago instead of St Louis, saving four days At the bridge over the North Fork it is taken by Holladay's Overland Stage Line By next June it is expected that three hundred miles more of this line will be finished, although work has been suspended for the winter, not to be resumed again until early spring This road from Omaha will be an extension of the Iowa branch of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad About thirty miles of this road on the east side of the Missouri River, between Woodbine and Council Bluffs, is unfinished, but when completed, there will be direct connection from Chicago over the Union Pacific

THE CENTRAL AND SOUTHERN BRANCHES

Besides the Omaha Branch, there are two other branches which are being very rapidly built, and which were by the original law to join the Union Pacific proper at the hundredth meridian. These are the Central Branch from Atchison, and the Southern Branch from Kansas City The last is improperly called the the Union Pacific Railway, Eastern Division, and thus much confusion of names arises General Simpson suggests that it be called the Kansas River Branch, or the Southern Branch The Central Branch is now completed for sixty miles west of Atchison, running through the splendid country embraced by the Kickapoo reserve, which land has been obtained by the company by a treaty between the Government and the Kickapoo Indians. It comprises about one hundred and twenty five thousand acres of the finest land in the West.

The Southern Branch is completed from the mouth of the Kansas river, on its south side, up the valley of the Kansas to Fort Riley and beyond, a distance of about one hundred and fifty miles These two branches, by the original law and by the maps filed at Washington, were to join on the banks of the Republican river at about the ninety-seventh meridian, and so proceed together and meet the Union Pacific at the hundredth meridian During the last session of Congress, however, the route of the Kansas River Branch was changed It was originally projected to run, after reaching Fort Riley, up the Republican Fork until it joined the Union Pacific at the hundredth meridian

By the changed law it was allowed to proceed westward in the most direct and practicable way to join the Union Pacific at a point not further west than fifty miles west of the meridian of Denver They have begun building beyond the Smoky Hill Fork, which will take them so far southward that the Santa Fe trade will probably accrue to them, and so that it is not improbable that they may never connect with the Union Pacific. By the law, however, the Southern Branch receives the subsidies hereafter referred to for the distance which it would have gone by the original law to join the Union Pacific, while the Central Branch has subsidies only for one hundred miles west of Atchison, at which distance it was expected to join the Southern Branch

The route of the Southern Branch being changed the Central Branch is left without any connection with the Union Pacific The work was proceeded with upon the virtual pledge of such a connection, and Congress will be asked this winter, in fulfillment of that pledge, to grant them a subsidy, the same as that of which they would have had the benefit of under the original act This subsidy obtained, they will run up the valley of the Republican or Little Blue to join the Union Pacific at the hundredth meridian at Fort Kearny They will then form a very direct connection from the east with the Union Pacific.

PROJECTED BRANCHES

A number of branches are projected on which no actual work has yet been done. The farthest north is the Sioux City Branch, to extend from Sioux City to join the Union Pacific, probably at Fremont, a place about fifty miles west from Omaha John J Blair, the President of the company, states that surveys have been made for the road, but not definitely fixed South of the Omaha Branch a road is projected as a continuation of the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad, to cross the Missouri river at the south side of the mouth of the Platte, to join the Union Pacific not further west than the hundredth meridian Its route has been fixed along the south side of the Platte and into the Platte Valley, about twenty miles east of Fort Kearny.

SUBSIDIES

The Government, to aid the construction of these roads through unpopulated regions, gives bonds and lands to each company The Central Pacific of California and Union Pacific, on the completion of sections of not less than twenty miles of their roads, are entitled to bonds from the Government to the amount of $16 000 per mile from their initial points to the Rocky Mountains, and to the west base of the same for a distance of one hundred and fifty miles, and across the Sierra Nevada to the east base of the same for a distance of one hundred and fifty miles they get $48,000 per mile Between the western base of the Rocky Mountains and the eastern base of the Sierra Nevada they get $32,000 per mile They are also entitled to ten alternate odd sections of land per mile on each side of their roads, within limits of twenty miles on each side not previously sold or reserved, or to which there is no pre-emption or homestead claim.

The Kanzas River Branch is entitled to $16 000 per mile, and lands as above, for a distance from the mouth of the Kansas river as far westward as would be equal to the length of its road if, according to the Act of July 1 1862, it had joined the Pacific Railroad at the one hundredth meridian The Central Atchison Branch gets $16,000 per mile, and lands as above, for one hundred miles west of Atchison The Omaha Branch gets the same The Sioux City Pacific Railroad gets $16 000, but only five alternate sections of land within ten miles on each side of the road The extension of the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad is entitled to ten alternate sections of land as above, but not to bonds

Pen Sketch of the Montana Mines

The Calaveras (Cal) Chronicle is permitted to publish a letter from Virginia City, Montana Territory dated the 1th instant and addressed to Mr W T Harris of Mokelumne Hill, from which we make the subjoined extracts

Upon reaching the Big Bend country my disappointment and disgust were so complete that I felt distrustful of finding anything in Montana worth traveling after but regarding that country as the next best we decided upon seeing the thing out So, accordingly, after a sojourn of about two weeks in that delectable region, I took a final adieu I think forever, of British Columbia I shall not now attempt a description of the country as you have no doubt heard it fairly represented by others of our Mokelumne Hill friends who were sold by the same auctioneer as my [illegible] * * Well we [illegible] miles down the river where we procured a horse apiece and with many other [illegible] trudged along our weary way. There are [illegible] indications of [illegible] of country as I have seen since I left [illegible] The citizens told me that [illegible] could be found every where, but in prospecting, I failed to find [illegible] to amount to anything. I traveled and I mined [illegible] the Elk Creek country [illegible] where I got work and stayed until the [illegible] part of September Elk Creek is one of the tributaries of the Big Blackfoot river and the first mining town we came to in approaching the Territory from the west A great many of the gulches there would pay well with a sufficiency of water to work them to advantage, which is not there and probably never will be The placer mining in this country is confined exclusively to gulches and small creeks and they are scattered here and there, in localities, over a great extent of country from a dozen to fifty miles apart and frequently only one or two gulches in a district will pay At Virginia City no profitable mining of consequence has been found outside of the bed banks and bars of Alder Gulch or as it is sometimes called, creek but that has been rich The surface of the country seems never to have undergone as great change as California has There are no hill diggings here—no lava or sedimentary formation like Stockton Hill—and the gold has generally not been removed a great distance from where it has become disengaged from its mother quartz A new mining camp was struck last fall on the head waters or source of the tributaries of the Salmon river, about 125 miles west of Virginia City It is represented as being a good paying district, and more extensive than any previous discovery made in this territory There will be a great rush made as soon as spring opens, for that district

Quartz throughout the territory promises well, In every district where any trial has been made of the ledges, they have been found to be rich, and greenbacks by the bushel have been sent here from New York and other eastern cities for their development The most of the mills will be brought from California Eastern mills so far in almost every instance have proved a complete failure Possessing, as she does, ledges unsurpassed in number, richness and extent, with the best of mill sites in every direction and plenty of fuel, the future prosperity and greatness of Montana, as a mining country does not admit of a doubt and it has not the worst of all climates Stock lives and keeps fat here the year round without having to be fed But little snow falls in the valleys along the river, and what does seldom lays over a few days at a time, and the grass having dried up in the summer, remains in good, sound condition until the next crop comes on Large crops of wheat barley, potatoes and other vegetables can be raised when the country escapes the ravages of the grasshoppers of which you have doubtless heard I think Montana presents at the present time the best opening for money making in a business way, of any country I was ever in Merchants are reaping rich harvests Business is done pretty much altogether on a cash basis, with enormous profits, which is bound to continue as long as transportation is so slow and difficult

The Lincoln Love Romance

SOME ADDITIONAL FACTS ABOUT ANN RUTLEDGE

(Springfield (Ill) Correspondence Boston Advertiser)

Too impatient to wait for the slow and faithful work, which is the only work that Herndon can do, Springfield demanded, meanwhile, a course of five lectures There are two millions of people in the State of Illinois, and a large proportion of them know, in some fashion, all the facts these five letters treat of It was Herndon's business to put these facts into an order which would force them to illustrate each other The lectures do not constitute the "Life" he is to publish they are only studies toward it The lecture which the Advertiser has criticised, is, I believe the fourth of the five and supplies a necessary link in the history It could no more be left out of a true life of Lincoln than Dante's love for Beatrice, or Petrarch's love for Laura, or Shelley's divorce from his first wife, could be omitted in the biographies of these poets, and still leave them intelligible For thirty years after the period it describes, his terrible sorrow continued to move him at times out of himself, and it is the only explanation of many significant facts The poem which is inseparably connected with his memory became precious to him simply for Ann Rutledge's sake

There is the story, and Herndon, nearly twelve years Lincoln's junior, has no more to do with it than I have as I tell it. Ann Rutledge was a lady—one of the very few who had penetrated to Illinois as early as 1833 Of a family educated and aristocratic, but broken down, she was betrothed, before Lincoln ever saw her, to a Scotch merchant In those days Illinois was as far from New York as Kamschatka now is They were soon to be married when the Scotchman went for business to that city For months nothing was heard of him, it was supposed that he was dead or had wickedly deserted Ann The truth was that he lay ill of delirious fever at a small wayside town In this state of things, while Ann's mind was tortured by suspense and disappointment Lincoln went to her father's house to board In time a sort of provisional engagement ensued These were the circumstances in both lives which depressed and pained, they learned to hold each other very dear Upon this state of things broke the rumor of the recovered Scotchman's return The delicate nature of the woman broke under it Betrothed to two—both of whom she loved—she had no choice but to die she did not live to see him enter New Salem How he who had been absent loved her let the sequel show He bought the farm for her sake and lives there, still a bachelor It was his quivering hand that pointed out to Herndon the spot where Ann Rutledge lies

That this story is true, I know, for I have read every line of the autograph letters on which it depends That is the truth on which the future life of Lincoln turned Herndon will sometime show us Had Ann lived to be his wife, it is the opinion of all his Western friends that he never would have sought a political life His tastes were quiet and domestic But this trial unhinged him, made him for years reckless, despairing, atheistic It was very gradually that he came to conquer the revolt of his own soul It was that work well done which fitted him to conquer other men I dare not pursue the subject further than to say that Herndon has a task before him which for delicacy and magnitude excels any of which I have ever dreamed Lincoln left no blood relations but his sons None of Ann Rutledge's survive her The unhappy Scotchman who returned to see her dead, saw every line of the lecture which the Advertiser criticised before it was printed I think few authors of modern times would have been honorable enough to ask his consent, since he was not to be named in it, but Herndon read the manuscript to me himself and would never allow me to speak of it till it had passed the last revision

I had not got far in Illinois before I found that the life of Abraham Lincoln was something very different from what we at the East had imagined I found Holland's book lying in half the bookcases, with the vexed disgust of readers penciled on the margin "Gammon," was the most frequent comment of those on the Sangamon Circuit "Pious cant" was another I had traversed the length and breadth of the State before I reached Springfield, but the hope that anything I might hear there would change the new impression hourly diminished, and when at last I laid my hand upon Herndon's papers and said, "Will the world ever hear that you shall tell the whole truth?" he answered "It must have that or nothing" "And what would Abraham Lincoln himself have desired?" I continued His eyes closed, a look of tenderness stole over his face and he answered "I seem to see him and hear him just as I used to do and he says 'Go ahead, Billy'" We must trust Herndon because Abraham Lincoln trusted him There is nothing in history more touching than their dealings with each other For more than twenty five years they were partners but never kept a separate account held each other's money as they held their own, and never suspected or experienced wrong never had a misunderstanding nor a grievance When Lincoln was about to leave for Washington he went to the dingy little law office which had sheltered his saddest hours He sat down on the couch "Billy" said he "you and I have been together all these years and have never passed a word Will you let my name stay on the old sign till I come back from Washington?" The tears started to Herndon's eyes He put out his hand—"Mr Lincoln, said he, 'I will never have another partner while you live and to the day of the assassination all the doings of the firm were in the name of Lincoln & Herndon

We must trust Herndon also, because this nation owes him a great debt It was he who first led Lincoln to anti slavery convictions Utterly refusing office at the President's hands he kept the friend's moral power to the very last God grant that he may live to complete a work which no one else would ever have the courage to undertake

He is a man of genius, and we shall have to be patient with his individualities, as we are with those of Carlyle The real difficulty in the lecture under discussion is, that in his delicacy he leaves the facts somewhat misty his imaginative mind being scarcely willing to let the daylight touch them The wilderness has educated him It was not our Concord which taught him law He showed me a law paper one day, with a curious twist about his mouth "You would not think much of that at the East," said he, "but it does our business here."

Congressional Theatricals—With the return [illegible] of the South [illegible] revival of the legitimate drama in Congress, the chivalry bringing back with them their polished manners and [illegible] style of address During the war [illegible] the representation of the Southern [illegible] the low comedy [illegible] sports were [illegible] the sever [illegible] of Northern [illegible] there were [illegible] whatever and sensational reporters [illegible] for Burlesque [illegible] and [illegible] with the last irruption of the re[illegible] into the [illegible] the House came the [illegible] interrupted by the temporary exits of the original performers

First, Rousseau a stalwart Kentuckian, insulted [illegible] of Iowa in the House and afterward presented him with a cane—[illegible] in the doorways of the rotunda Inspired by this highly successful performance [illegible] of Maine and Roscoe Conkling lately elected Senator from New York and known among the Congressional reporters as "the curled Adonis" [illegible] had a bit of a [illegible] about the Provost Marshal's bureau, their [illegible] in personal allusions [illegible] reported in the newspapers with "sensation," interpolated in brackets in the approved style

Recent dispatches say that Cooper, of Tennessee who hired out as Private Secretary to President Johnson while waiting for his seat and Kelley of Pennsylvania, whom Sun et Cox used to call "the gentleman with the graveyard voice" in allusion to his somewhat heavy tragedy tones has engaged in a brief [illegible] performance which appears to have produced a marked sensation and relieved the dreary monotony of the drowsy [illegible] of the House It seems that Kelley had made a speech in which he denounced Johnson as a usurper as he is to the which Cooper chivalrously championing the weaker side, replied by flinging Marmion at the radical Pennsylvanian, thus "Lord Angus thou hast lied" to which Lord Angus otherwise Kelley growing very red in the face we doubt not, for Kelley is of Hibernian blood, said that "the gentleman from Tennessee (that was Pickwickian) was the confidential and paid agent of the usurper as at resaid, and knew all the secrets of the usurpation To this he should have added, in the McKean Buchanan manner "Ha-a-a! may the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet have thee!" but he didn't and Cooper said that if Kelly said he was a paid agent he lied again At this point comes in the climax of the drama and the appetizing word "sensation" rounds off the sentence before the unappreciating Speaker breaks in by calling the gentleman (Pickwickian, again) to order Kelly very calmly justified his original statement, but the show was over, and the curtain goes tamely down, with the question passed as amended "—S F Times

AT THE

Bennett House,

SALEM, OREGON

L. JAY S. TURNEY,

HAVING LEASED THE ABOVE NAMED HOTEL, is prepared to accommodate the traveling public, and ONE HUNDRED REGULAR BOARDERS, in as good style as any House on the Coast He has determined to make the Bennett as good as the best and better than any public house in Salem He will soon complete some important improvements which will add greatly to its appearance and comfort and intends to merit and hopes to receive his share of patronage

He has secured the services of "Charley" (known to be the best cook in Salem and one of the best in the whole country) and other competent persons to manage the culinary department, and is resolved to set as good a table as can be found anywhere—not in clap trap pomp and show flummery and fine furniture but in an abundant supply of the very best the market affords

His Bar room will be kept warmed and lighted and well supplied with newspapers periodicals and other suitable reading matter, and kept in a manner which will make it an agreeable resort

In short he intends making an effort to please ALL who stop at the BENNETT HOUSE And he most respectfully requests his friends everywhere to give the old and well known stand at least one more trial before concluding they can do as well elsewhere and promises if they are not well treated and properly cared for and at reasonable figures, it will not be the fault of the public's most obedient and most humble servant

THE OYSTERS

PACKED BY

Louis M'Murray & Co.

OF BALTIMORE,

ARE ACKNOWLEDGED BY THE ENTIRE EAStern [illegible] trade to be beyond comparison [illegible] in this market That

THEIR EXCELLENCE IS NOT IMAGINARY,

Any one who has tried them will admit, and the simple secret of their superiority lies in the extreme care and immense expense lavished upon their preparation Each Oyster is opened by hand with the knife with strict regard to the preservation of the Liquor, by which means the original flavor is retained Contrast this method with the one usually pursued of opening the Oysters in bulk by steaming, by which means the native liquor is lost and a manufactured one is substituted, and the reason for the actual superiority of this brand is at once apparent

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system! Look at their pallid, [illegible] and disfigured faces and their broken-down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible life-destroying maladies—see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late Send them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, a physician who has made private disease his especial study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate cases without mercury or any injurious drugs It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practised by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing, with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, a disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, feted breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats monomania and frequent insanity If relief be not obtained should apply immediately, either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure Dr G will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure or make no charge

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Doctor Gibbon, stating case, symptoms length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded free from damage and curiosity to any part of the country with full and plain directions for use for Ten Dollars sent in registered letter or through Wells Fargo & Co
